DROWNED IN WISCONSIN

Boat With Party of Eleven Capsizes
and Five Drown. Three Bodies Recovered

The capsizing of a boat in the Wisconsin river, near the Squaw harbor, resulted in the drowning of five people last Tuesday evening.

The dead are: Mrs. Ezra Crow, aged 32 years, and two children, ages two months and two years; daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Crow, and fourteen years; S. L. Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Miller, aged two years and three months.

The particulars of the sad affair, as far as can be ascertained, are as follows: A party of eleven people, the majority of whom were children, were crossing the river on their way to Black Lake, where they intended to spend the day fishing. The boat, which they occupied was of the flat bottom, home-made order, and not altogether safe. When they had nearly reached the opposite bank, one of the boys grabbed a clump of bushes and jumped ashore. In doing so he sent the boat out in the middle of the stream where the current was very swift. The women occupants of the boat immediately became frightened, and in moving about the boat upset. Three of the party, Henry Ross and two boys saved themselves by clinging to bushes along the bank. Mrs. George Crow and little child hung to the sides of the boat and were carried down stream for nearly two miles, before they reached shore.

The bodies of Mrs. Ezra Crow and the Miller child were recovered late Thursday evening, considerable distance down the river from where the accident occurred.

One of the bodies was found Monday morning, while the other two little ones are still missing. Searching parties have been at work since the accident, dragging the river for the bodies.

The funerals of the three victims, whose bodies have been recovered, were held Saturday afternoon and Tuesday morning from Hildebrand's undertaking rooms. Rev. H. H. H. of the Free Methodist church officiated and burial took place in Forest Home cemetery.

The accident is indeed a most sorrowful one, affecting as it does three families, who in their hour of great bereavement have the heartfelt sympathy of friends and neighbors and the whole community at large.

FOR POWER AT EAGLE RIVER.

Dam Bill No. 770 A has been passed by the legislature and signed by the governor and is now a law.

The bill gives to the Town of Eagle River the privilege to build a dam at Eagle Rapids for the purpose of creating power to be used for lighting, heating, pumping and other purposes, and is something that this place has long needed.

With one of the best places on the Wisconsin River for water power within our borders, the town can now build a dam and water power that will enable Eagle River to develop into a city and advance upward and not remain in the same old rut that it has been for years. With a good power house at Otter Rapids we will have a great inducement to offer to manufacturing plants to locate here and it will be but a short time before such plants will be vying with each other for the best locations. Now we have the dam privilege from the legislature we should not delay but go ahead at once and build the dam and plant.

With a good dam and power plant our fine chain of lakes, best of farming lands, good schools and public buildings and one of the finest located towns in this part of the state, we can build up a city in a most substantial manner and at a very nominal cost. We understand that just as soon as the power plant is ready for service, a manufacturing plant that will employ 200 men, will locate here. Just think what a plant like that would mean to this place. Other plants would soon come here and it would be but a short time before we would be a rival of our neighboring city Rhinelander. Let everyone work to that end, and build a dam and power house at once.—Eagle River Review.

THE GLORIOUS FOURTH.

The Fourth will be observed in Rhinelander this year in the good old fashioned way. There will be a salute at sunrise, parade at 10 o'clock a. m., speaking at 11:30 in Keenan's park, where arrangements have been made to have the picnic. Games and other sports will be provided to amuse the crowd, also a game of base ball in the afternoon, and races at the fair grounds. The display of fireworks will take place at Keenan's park in the evening and will be worth seeing. Among other things there will be a portrait of President Roosevelt, red and green fire displays and about fifty entirely new designs in fireworks. Everybody invited.

CO. L INSPECTED.

Major Green of Marinette, one of Wisconsin National Guard officers, was in the city Monday evening and inspected Co. L. of this city. This was their final inspection before leaving for Camp Douglas. The boys made an excellent showing.

THE HOLD-UP MAN AGAIN.

The hold-up man again made his appearance Friday night, but this time attacked one of his own sex. While crossing the Brown Street viaduct, Wm. Griffin was approached by the man who grabbed him by the shoulders and demanded his money. Griffin although slightly crippled, is a man of strong muscular ability and scarcely were the words out of his assailant's mouth before he swung back and hit him square in the face. The man was partly stunned by the blow, but realized that it was most necessary for him to move on which he hurriedly did. Griffin had considerable money with him which he did not intend to lose.

The description of the man as given by Griffin agrees with the description given by other witnesses. This work is undoubtedly being done by one man.

ANTIGO POLICE KILLED.

Chief of Police, John McArthur, for ten years head of the Antigo police force, and a man well known in Rhinelander, was shot and killed Saturday afternoon by John Wittinger, an escaped maniac from the Northern Asylum at Winnebago. Wittinger lived a few miles from Antigo and McArthur was ordered to recapture him. The insane man hid himself in a tree near his home, and as the chief came toward him, fired. The weapon used a 12 gauge shotgun. McArthur died instantly. The maniac made his escape and has not yet been found. McArthur was forty years old and is survived by a wife and three children.

WOLVES WORTH $20.00.

By an act of the legislature the bounty on wolves has been increased to such an extent that it is worth while to hunt them. Heretofore the bounty given by the state was $3.00 providing the county board voted a bounty equal to that given by the state. Chapter 321 of the laws of 1905 fixes the bounty at $10.00 from the state and $10.00 from the county. Unlike the old law, however, the new law establishes the bounty at the above figure and no resolution of the county board can change or abrogate it, according to an opinion given by the attorney general.

LOSES AN ARM.

Thos. Barrett, a woodman, had his right arm taken off by a St. Paul train near Woodruff last Wednesday night. Barrett had been drinking for several days and at the time of the accident was suffering from tremors. He was under the impression that he could knock a locomotive from the track, and in his efforts to do so, fell under the wheels. He was without funds and was removed to the county hospital here, where he is now confined. He is terribly demoralized and it is necessary to keep him in irons.

OFFICIALS WHO DO THEIR DUTY.

There appears to be an increasing spirit of emulation among the district attorneys of the county in the prosecution of grafters and corrupt public officials, since District Attorney Deneen and District Folk have been rewarded by their respective states by their election as governor. And there is no more astonishing fact than that, so soon as a prosecuting officer manifests a disposition to attend to the duties he was elected for, with vigor and an efficient determination to punish evil-doers, the people begin to connect his name with political positions of greater honor and power.

The district attorney—not here in Wisconsin particularly, but generally—has long been a member of the free-holding crowd of his country, and has shaped his course, as so many of the other office holders do, merely with an eye to a reelection; and with politicians of pretty nearly every grade, the idea has grown strong that success can be continued best by keeping in with the gang. It is a sign of a healthier state of the public mind that the district attorneys, at least, are waking up to a realization of the fact that the general public approves an official who does his duty, and that a ringing declaration of an intention to serve the public honestly, intelligently and without fear of consequences—followed up by energetic action—pretty nearly "makes" a man politically. It is a hopeful sign.—Milwaukee Journal.

ANNUAL SUNDAY SCHOOL PICNIC.

All members and friends are requested to meet at the church on Mason street at 9 o'clock. A conveyance will be provided for the children. Bring well filled lunch baskets.

ESCAPES FROM POOR FARM.

Thos. Barrett escaped from the poor house late Monday night and coming down town played havoc about the streets until he was arrested by the officers. The man had been kept in chains for several days but after reaching the city some unknown person, filed his irons apart. He is now in the county jail where he will be kept until the effects of excessive drinking have left him.

LIGHTNING STRIKES CHURCH.

Lightning struck the steeple of the Methodist Episcopal church, corner Stevens and Rives Streets Sunday morning. The roof was immediately afire, and but for the prompt service of the department, assisted by the heavy rain, the structure would no doubt have been destroyed. The damage was but slight.

Anyone could safely bet that the farmers in the southern part of the state would be glad to have some sand in their heavy clay soil this rainy month of June.

A Milwaukee clergyman in a sermon Sunday urged that religious spirit be taken to camps and resorts. A good plan, but Onondaga county reporters carry their spirits in a jug labelled "bait."

Bishop McCabe says that Mayor Weaver of Philadelphia will be the next governor of Pennsylvania. We hope the Bishop's political ideas are as well founded as we believe his religious ideas to be.

Mrs. Rogers of Vermont, who acknowledges murdering her husband, has been sentenced to death, three times, and three times been reprieved. Last Friday was to be the last day with her, but at the last minute, as it were, a stay of proceedings was granted till December 6.

Altho guilty and deserving death, Mrs. Rogers will probably cheat the gallows of its honest dues.

GROVER CLEVELAND TRUSTEE. Confidence in the Equitable Life Insurance Company has been enhanced by the appointment and acceptance of Grover Cleveland as managing trustee of the company.

Grover Cleveland is an honorable upright man. He was not a perfect success as president, but everyone has faith in his sincerity of purpose. He will do right if he can. Between him and Alexander and Hyde who retire there is a great step, a gulf that separates the honest man and the men who will take and have taken the funds of others.

Grover Cleveland will not lie, he will not steal, he will not misappropriate the funds which belong to other men. The company is to be congratulated that it has come out of the mire of perversion, theft and falsehood.

The legislature adjourned finally, Friday at 1:15 a. m., after a longer session by thirty days than ever before.

Some members pride themselves on the "good work" done. But if any one can see much of any good beyond the railroad rate commission, he must have more powerful lens in his mental powers than most of us.

The University and Normal schools were given money galore, while many of the state institutions were almost crippled by cutting down appropriations, not only refusing in some cases everything for repairs, but cutting down appropriations of former years when food and clothing were much cheaper. And all of these, after the legislative committee had visited the institutions and reported favorably and urged necessary repairs. If this is good work to thus economize, then the legislature is worthy of commendation.

Still, the appropriations in general are perhaps higher than ever before. But they were made to those commissions and institutions where employees devoted nearly their whole time to lobbying. In this way were committees hoodwinked, and recommended some needless appropriations. For "good work" the legislature of 1905 stands very low in comparative rank with the legislatures of previous years.

MAKE HIM GOVERNOR (?)

St. Louis had a prosecuting attorney by the name of Folk, last year, who followed on the trail of grafters until they threw up their hands for mercy. The prosecutions under Attorney Folk had a most wholesome effect, and grafters in that city are not pursuing their vocation as they were before the suits last year. Mr. Folk's course was so satisfactory to the people of Missouri that he was elected governor, in which position he is still fighting for the people's rights as strenuously as he did in 1904.

Milwaukee has a Folk in the person of Francis E. McGovern, the district attorney for that county. He is doing his whole duty in every way, prosecuting the grafters until the whole gang who have robbed city and county for years are shaking with fear. Another grand jury will bring in bills against a larger lot than ever before within a few days, and white washers and fence givers are in a tremor.

that honest men never have any conception of. Mr. McGovern shows no enmity, nor no favors to any of these men, many of whom are his personal friends.

Wisconsin will need just such a man as Mr. McGovern for governor, ere many years. He is still a comparatively young man, but he is a brilliant lawyer, a genuine, honest reformer, and is working early and late now, in fact is overworking in the interests of the people. We know little of the man except from newspaper reports, but these indicate his firmness for the right, his perfect fearlessness in his stand for the people and his great ability. He is a striking example of a reformer, fit for any position within the gift of the people.

TIRED OF IT.

"I am tired of this thing. They have hounded me and made life miserable. Now I am going to quit the whole political game and wash my hands of it."

"There's nothing in it. I am sick of it all. I'll be glad when I'm out of it."

"As soon as I write out my resignation I shall take it to sheriff Cary, who will notify the governor. That is according to the law. I don't know when the resignation will take effect, probably about Monday. I will probably hold my office until my successor is appointed by the governor and qualified."

"This will be likely to be hard upon a big crowd of officials," the reporter ventured to suggest.

"You know it well," said Seidel, quickly, with a smile. "I can't help that. I am going to spare none. I don't care where it hits; there is only one thing I want to do, and that is to tell the whole story and get it off my mind."

Thus spoke Otto Seidel, register of deeds for Milwaukee county, last week when he resigned his office on receipt of a subpoena to appear before the grand jury in the graft cases.

And it is the feeling of every grafter, who may see prison doors opening before him, or at any time be expecting proceedings against him, knowing that the charges may be sustained and conviction follow. Every night of his life he wishes that he had been honest in his official career, and would gladly give back all that he had received, just for the sweet peace of the innocent man.

An innocent man does not fear arrest. A guilty man is constantly fearing it. Would that these two conditions could be effectively impressed on the youth of the land that future generations might be happier because of being better.

Seidel is happier now that he has told the truth, even tho his life may be in danger from enemies.

Bigelow finally pleaded guilty, is now in a national prison, but is happier than he was in Milwaukee after his arrest.

Tell the whole truth, but may our lives be such that the whole truth will not convict of grafting, stealing and other crimes.

The Rhinelander Hudag team turned the trick on the Bundy aggregation at Bundy last Sunday winning by a score of 5 to 1. Time and again a Bundyite would reach 3rd base only to succumb through inability of the batter to connect safely and not until the last inning did they succeed in putting a runner across the plate. Rhinelander scored one in the 1st, one in the 4th and three in the ninth. The last three scores made possible by a single and errors. The game was close and hotly contested throughout.

1905 SESSION ENDS.

WISCONSIN LEGISLATURE FORMALLY ADJOURNS.

LA FOLLETTE DOES NOT GUIT

Although Governor Leaves for Chattanooga Trip, and Is Still Chief Executive, Davidson Does His Work.

(W. W. Garrison, Staff Correspondent.)

Madison, Wis., June 26.—Wisconsin's 1905 legislature adjourned last week sine die, and the longest session in the history of the body was ended. The session lasted 162 days. Midnight adjournment was taken and in comparison with the usual strenuous times, when legislators quit, the ending was looked upon as rather tame. All through the last day it was expected that Gov. La Follette would send in his resignation and forward Lieut. Gov. Davidson's name for ratification, but no such incident occurred and now the executive has left for his Chattanooga trip with his substitute doing his work at the salary of five dollars a day. The city is now deserted of solons and nothing but a number of idle correspondents remain on the spot as witnesses of the most important legislative session which the badger state has ever seen.

Senate Confirms Appointments.

On the last day of the session Gov. La Follette sent to the senate for confirmation a number of appointments, which the upper house solons ratified in record-breaking order. The commissions on which the appointments were made and the occupants are:

State tax commission—Judge N. S. Gilson, of Fond du Lac, term to expire on first Monday in May, 1909; George Curtis, Jr., of Merrill, term to expire first Monday in May, 1911; Nils P. Haugen, of Madison, term to expire on first Monday in May, 1913; salary of each $1,500 a year. All were members of the old commission, Judge Gilson being chief commissioner and the two others being his assistants.

State civil service commission—Prof. Samuel E. Sparling, of Madison, assistant professor of political science in state university, term to expire

PECK'S BAD BOY ABROAD.

The Bad Boy and His Dad Climb Vesuvius—A Chicago Lady Joins the Party and Causes Trouble.

By HON. GEORGE W. PECK.
(Ex-Governor of Wisconsin, Former Publisher of Peck's Sun, Author of "Peck's Bad Boy," Etc.)

(Copyright, 1903, by Joseph R. Bowles.)

Naples, Italy.—Seigneur is Grocerino! I guess that will make you stand without hitting for a little while. Say, I am getting so full of dead languages, and foreign phrases, that I shall have to have an operator on my tongue when I get home before I can spell the United States language again, so you can make head or tail of it. You see, I don't stay long enough in a country to acquire its language, but I get a few words into my system, so now my English is so mixed with French words, Italian garlic and German throat trouble that I cannot understand myself unless I look in a glass and watch the motions of my lips. Dad has not picked up a word of any foreign language, and says he should consider himself a traitor to his country if he tried to talk anything but English. He did get to be could order a glass of beer by holding up his finger and saying "ein," but he found later that just holding up his finger without saying "ein" would bring the beer all the same to be cut out the language entirely and works his finger until it needs a rest.

When I used to study my geography at the little red schoolhouse, and look at the picture of the volcano Vesuvius, and read about how it would throw up red-hot lava, and ashes, and rocks as big as a house, and wipe out cities, it looked so terrible to me that I was glad when we got through with the volcano lesson, and got to Greenland's icy mountains, where there was no danger except being frozen to death, or made sick by eating blubber sliced off of whales.

Then I never expected to be right on the very top of that volcano, throwing stones down in the lava, and sailing chips down the streams of hot stuff, just as I skidded chips on ice water at home when the streets were flooded by spring rains. Say, there is no more danger on Vesuvius than there is in a toboggan slide, or shooting the chutes at home. I thought we would have to hire dogs to carry us up to the top, and be robbed and held up, and may be murdered, but it is just as easy as going up in the elevator of a skyscraper, and no more terrifying than sitting on a 50-cent seat in a baseball park at home and witnessing the "destruction of Pompeii" by a fireworks display.

The crater looks sort of creepy, like a big cauldron kettle boiling soup on a farm, only it is bigger, and down in the earth's bowels you can well believe there is trouble, and if you believe in a hell, you can get it. Illustrated proper, but the rivulets of lava that flow out of the wrinkles around the mouth of the crater are no more appalling than making fudges over a gas stove. When the lava cools you would swear it was fudges, only you can't eat the lava and get indigestion as you can eating fudges.

It was hard work to get dad to go up on the volcano, because he said he knew he would fall into it, and get his clothes burned, and he said he couldn't climb clear to the top, on account of his breath being short, but when I told him he could ride up on a trolley car, and have the volcano brought right to him, he weakened, and one morning we left Naples early and before two hours had passed we were on a little cogwheel railroad going up, and dad was looking down on the scenery, expecting every minute the cogs would slip and we would cut loose and go down all in a heap and be plastered all over the vineyards and big trees and be killed.

I don't know what makes dad so nervous, but he wanted a woman from Chicago, who was on the car with us, to hold his hand all the way up, but she said she was no nurse in a home for the aged, and she said she would cut dad if he didn't let go of her. I told her she better not get mad if she knew what was good for her, for he was a regular Bluebeard, and wouldn't take no slack from no Chicago female, 'cause he had buried nine wives already. So she held his hand, and I guess she thinks she will be my step-mother, but I bet she don't.

Well, after we got almost to the top the car stopped, and we had to walk the rest of the way, several hundred feet, and we had to have a pusher and a putter for dad, a dog to go ahead and pull him up, and another to put his shoulders against dad's pants and shove. Gee, but it was a picture to see dad "go up old baldhead" with the dogs perching and swarming at dad for being so heavy, and the Chicago woman laughing, and me pushing her up.

One thing that scared dad was that every little way there was a shrine, where the guides left dad lying on the ground, blocked with a piece of cold lava, so he wouldn't roll down, like you would block a wagon wheel, and they would go to the shrine and kneel and say some prayers.

False Modesty Cause of Divorce

By PROF. WM. NORMAN CUTHRIE,
University of Chicago.

word and indulge in the most prudent circumlocutions. Get rid of false modesty. That is the real cure for the divorce evil. The great danger in not answering questions of sex is that if they are not answered openly they will be answered secretly and perhaps wrongly. The great poets have all recognized this truth. The attitude of George Meredith, Robert Browning and Henrik Ibsen is: "Look at this matter squarely in the face."

An ideal treatment of the question is seen in the poetry of William Morris and in the fairy tales. At the dawn of literature there seems to have been an innocent, childlike treatment of it, without any thought of wrong. There was never in Eden any eavesdropping Satan, as Milton wickedly thinks.

Christianity formerly held a paradoxical position on marriage. While regarding it as a holy sacrament the church also considered that marriage was a concession to poor human nature and that religious people should not marry. As a consequence of this attempt to smother sexuality there was an outbreak of it. The dramas of Wagner and some of the writings of Zola and Tolstoi are manifestations of this reaction.

Some of the lower types of animal life sacrifice their own lives in reproduction. From this we learn that marriage is not for happiness, but for sacrifice. Because marriage is for sacrifice it finally results in happiness. He who goes in for happiness as the primary factor in marriage will not find it.

Biology also teaches us that marriage should be a union of strength, not of weakness. But we are coming to realize this, we are coming more and more to oppose juvenile marriages.

We also learn that marriage is for the benefit of the race, the offspring. Woe to us if we forget this. He who has children should want them to be better than himself. One of the chief advantages of marriage is that it develops foresight in the individual. Most of us are willing to trust to luck for ourselves but none of us want to trust to luck for our families. No two people are properly married until they have suffered together.

Dad was afraid they were going to charge the prayers in the bill for pushing him up, but I told dad that these people expected every time they went up to the top that it would be their last trip, as they knew that some day the volcano would open in a new place and swallow them whole, with all the tourists. Then he gave them a dollar apiece to pray for him, and wanted to go back down the mountain and let Vesuvius run its own fireworks, but the Chicago lady told dad to brace up and she would protect him, and so the guides gave a few more pushes, and we were on top of the volcano, and dad collapsed and had to be brought to with smelling salts, and whiskey that the woman carried in her pistol pocket.

Gee, but it was worth all the trouble to get up the mountain, to see the sight that opened up. The hole in the mountain filled with boiling stuff was worth the price of admission, and the roaring of the boiling stuff, and the explosions way down cellar, and the flying stones, the smoke going into the air for a mile, like the burning of an oil well, the red-hot lava fusing crevices to leak through, and flowing down the side of the mountain in streams like hot maple syrup, made a scene that caused us to take off our hats and thank the good Lord that the thing hadn't overflowed enough to hurt us. But I could see dad was scared, 'cause when I wanted him to go around the edge of the crater with me, and see the hell-roaring free show from other points of view, and see where the hot ashes years ago rolled down and covered Pompeii and Herculaneum, he balked and said he had seen all he wanted to, and if he could stay alive until the next car went down the mountain, they could all have his interest in Vesuvius, and be darned to them, but he said if I wanted to go around looking for trouble, he would stay there under a big rock, with the Chicago lady, and wait for me to come back. She said she knew dad was all tired out, and needed rest, and she would stay with him, and keep him cheered up; so I left them and went off with one of the dogs, to slide down hill on some flowing lava, and pick up specimens.

Well, sir, I wish I could get along some way without telling the rest of this dad story, but if I am going to be a historian I have got to tell the whole blame thing.

When I left dad and the Chicago woman she had produced a lunch from somewhere about her person, and a small bottle, and they were eating and drinking, and dad was laughing more natural than I had seen him laugh since we ran over the old woman with the automobile at Nice, and she was smiling on dad just as though she was his sweetheart. (As I went around the crater, a couple of blocks away, I looked back and dad had laid his head in her lap, and she was stroking his hair.

Well, I picked up specimens, burned the soles of my shoes wading in the lava, and took in the volcano from all sides, and after an hour I went back to where dad and the woman were laughing, but the woman was gone, and dad acted as though he had been hit by an express train, his eyes were wild, his collar was gone, his pocket-book was on the ground, empty, his coat was gone, his scarf had disappeared, when he was robbed the other time was missing, and dad's tongue was ran out, and he was yelling for water. I thought he had been trying to drink some lava.

"Dad, what in the world has hap-

Clothes for the Little Ones

SOME PARTY FROCKS.

FRENCH mothers use fine materials for the underwear of their small children, but not elaborately trimmed, perhaps the merest frill of lace. American mothers might take a valuable lesson from this. The season is marked by the numbers of print frocks for wee maids, print a material that for some time was relegated to servants. It washes beautifully, is very strong, the ideal stuff out of which to fashion everyday frocks. Often these are made very plainly, the trimming one of those big collars made of all-over embroidery, or hainsook edged with tulle lace. Get the right shape and fit, and one need not spend a great deal on the material.

For young misses, there is nothing better than a street suit of light gray wool, the skirt pleated, the coat a semi-blossom one. With a variety of waists, here are any number of costumes, enough even to satisfy the budding woman. With a plain shirt waist in the morning, the suit looks tidy and trim; with a lingerie waist in the afternoon, it is quite a dress-up affair.

For frocks to wear on the cool days of summer we find dem-t-season models of mohair, and lightweight wool plaids. Flannel, also, is a material that is warm enough for quite a low temperature. We observed one mohair dress that was exceedingly pretty; it was of blue, with a pointed yoke smocked in lighter blue, the belt was white, embroidered in blue, the skirt was smocked three inches at the waist line, and the sleeves were smocked from elbow to wrist.

A dainty little frock for a six-year-old was of white hainsook, fine and sheer. It was on the Empire order, hung straight back and front from a square yoke of embroidery, the joining was a band of beading. Pink ribbons were run through the beading, the stockings and hair ribbons were of pink, the shoes white. The hat was of white horsehair and lace frills, about the crown were wreathed baby roses in pink and white. It was not startlingly new, but very dainty and fresh. We saw an athletic young girl come

To Wear Indoors and Outdoors

WE walked to advertise the fact that we were bound on an outing; the girl that sailed on the water had anchors embroidered on her sleeve; the girl that rode a wheel wore a much abbreviated skirt, and when the automobile appeared, the lady that motored—moted, mounded, what eye-call-it—dressed in a manner to make conspicuous her particular pleasure. But now, perhaps because out-door life is an established fact, no longer such merely is attempted, the dressing is more quiet. One notices it particularly in automobile costume.

Of course the leather characterizing the wardrobe of many motorists differs decidedly from ordinary fabrics, but not all make use of the leather. One sees in the parks and on the country roads many motorists whose dress is very like the usual traveling dress, and one that speeds this summer may feel herself appropriately attired in a trim tailored suit. The checks are especially good, the materials and colors stand much use and exposure. The small hats of the season also are suitable, but a brim is needed to protect from glare. One very pretty checked costume noticed was a short skirt of black and white wool worn with a silk waist of the same combination and a short dark coat. The three pieces had pipings of red.

By the way, in spite of Parisian protest, short skirts continue very smart for general wear. As the season progresses, one sees more and more of them, and they seem to have added style to recommend them. The best have short coats or boleros—a long coat very rarely looks well with an ankle length skirt.

To turn to piazza frocks and those for wear in the house. Our illustration pictures a simple and smart waist of gray-blue pongee, with a little trimming of lace and insertion. Two deep tucks at the shoulders give the desired fullness, the sleeve is full to the elbow, where it is met by a deep cuff, which must be carefully fitted to give the proper set. Frills finish sleeves at the wrist now, it being the day of daintiness and lingerie softness.

White linen suits and colored linen suits are numerous, seen often in the form of jacket and skirt than in the shirt waist popular for two years back. To wear with the white costume are charming black and white hats and white veils. The gloves should be white and cool looking, the shoes may be either white or black. The belt may be of white kid or linen; for the plainer frocks ribbon is not so good.

Stout women that have left it incumbent upon them to avoid white, this season may with impunity indulge in it, the models are so well adapted to them. They fit about the hips, but not with exaggerated "hubb" lack, which but accentuates both awkwardness and angularity; the coats are on the sack order and all semi-bloose, fall in straight lines; the sleeves are smallish.

The Bonaparte That Married an American Girl

Napoleon's Youngest Brother, Jerome, Who Wedded a Baltimore Belle—Their Separation—The Pattersons and Patterson-Bonapartes.

THE appointment of Charles Bonaparte, of Baltimore, successor to Paul Morton as secretary of the navy, brings up the story of the grandfather, that Jerome Bonaparte who married and divorced an American girl.

In command of a French frigate, Jerome visited American shores in 1803, and was warmly received by society, the fame of the first consul giving prestige to his "youngest, weakest and most worthless of Napoleon's brothers." Jerome became enamored of a Baltimore belle, Miss Elizabeth Patterson, and they were married Christmas eve, 1803. They lived together until April, 1805, and in the latter part of that year Jerome was persuaded by Napoleon to consent to a divorce. The pope refused to sanction the divorce, the marriage was annulled by Napoleon's council of state. Not a few Catholics took upon the Baltimore Bonapartes as the only legitimate descendants of Jerome Bonaparte.

Inexpressible is the story of the life of Elizabeth Patterson, the proud young woman Napoleon referred to as "that young person to whom he (Jerome) had attached himself." Concerning her marriage, which had been solemnized with no small ceremony, the bishop of Baltimore, afterwards archbishop and private of the American Catholic church, officiating, the mayor of Baltimore and other prominent citizens present, Napoleon declared it null, both in a religious and legal point of view. The spirited young woman was subjected to every indignity, finally abandoned.

Napoleon, then first consul, spoke of the "mesalliance" made by Jerome; and perhaps to Europeans, accustomed to associate rank with plain title, a plain Miss might bespeak a rather humble origin. An American, fully conscious of classes in this country, would smile at the term when used in connection with a Patterson of Baltimore. Mr. William Patterson was a southerner of high position and great wealth, an intimate friend of Washington and Charles Carroll of Carrollton. Thomas Jefferson wrote thus of his standing: "Mr. Patterson is president of the bank of Baltimore, and the richest man in Maryland, perhaps in the United States, except Charles Carroll of Carrollton. He is a man of great worth and respectability."

When Jerome Bonaparte visited in Baltimore, society made much of the young man, he was the honored guest at dinner and rout and ball. It was at the home of Samuel Chase, Capt. Bonaparte met Miss Patterson and was fascinated by her beauty and sprightliness. But when the young man showed a desire to make her his wife, his father objected, friends warned her, fearing the match would be displeasing to Napoleon. The young girl met the remonstrances with the declaration that she "would rather be the wife of Jerome Bonaparte for an hour than the wife of any other man for life."

For a brief period they were happy, in the northern cities visited while on their wedding tour, Madame Bonaparte was feted and admired. But shortly, ere the honeymoon was past, came ill news from across the water. The first consul was in a great fury; Jerome's allowance was to be stopped at once; he was ordered to return to France by the first frigate, at the risk of being regarded a deserter; French vessels were ordered to refuse passage to the "young person" and if she should ever enter France, without delay would be returned to the United States.

This was pleasant news for the newly established family. Jerome dilly-dallied awhile, and then he and his young wife set sail from Baltimore, March, 1805, in one of Mr. Patterson's ships. On arrival of the vessel at Lisbon, it was surrounded by a French guard, Jerome's wife was not allowed to land. A representative of Napoleon appeared and inquired what he could do for "Miss Patterson." She gave characteristic answer: "Tell your master that Madame Bonaparte is ambitious and demands her rights as a member of the imperial family."

Vain ambition, the rights were slow in coming. Jerome left for Paris to make a personal plea. Napoleon refused to see him, but told him by letter that he would never acknowledge the marriage. He promised "Miss Patterson," on condition that she returned to America and provided she did not retain the Bonaparte name, an annuity of 60,000 francs. Jerome's mother and oldest brother (Joseph) acknowledged the marriage, its celebration according to the rites of the Catholic church; but Napoleon was unrelenting, when at last he granted Jerome an interview the latter was upbraided with: "So, sir, you are the first of the family who has shamefully abandoned his post. It will require many splendid actions to wipe off the stain from your reputation. As to your love affair with your little girl, I do not regard it."

In the meantime the wife waited at Lisbon during the month of April, and then sailed for the port of Amsterdam. Napoleon, now "absolute master of the continent of Europe," had ordered the grand pensionary of the Batavian republic to prevent the landing in any port of that country of "Madame Bonaparte" or any person assuming that name. A gun-ship and a frigate kept so forbiddingly close to her vessel, the "Erin," that the unhappy wife of the

ODD FAMILY RELATIONS END

Death of Lewis J. Phillips in New York Discloses Queer Situation Which Is Dissolved.

New York.—Lewis J. Phillips, senior member of the real estate firm of L. J. Phillips & Co., and a member of the chamber of commerce, is dead at his home, 15 East Eighty-third street, of heart disease. Mr. Phillips was 71 years old. In 1921 he came to this city from London, where he was born.

To immediate friends alone was known for several years after 1921, a peculiar relationship existing within the Phillips family. Isaac Phillips was the junior member of the firm. When he died he left a widow and eight children. It was not publicly known until 1927 that L. J. Phillips had contracted a civil marriage with the widow of his brother. The children opposed the union, and resented any allusion to the civil contract, which never was followed by a marriage rite. Under the religion professed by both persons a civil ceremony is not recognized as a marriage rite.

In Ocean avenue, Asbury Park, in 1927, the entire family lived under one roof, a condition which existed to the day of Mr. Phillips' death. His brother's widow survives him. At the family residence Mrs. Phillips could not be seen. Members of the family did not wish to talk about the civil marriage contracted so many years ago.

During all the years since a justice of the peace read the marriage service for Mr. and Mrs. Phillips the couple had lived apart. The children have always regarded each other as cousins, and to Mrs. Phillips Mr. Phillips was always a brother-in-law instead of a husband. Only in the transfer of property and the signing of legal documents was the true relationship observed.

The Good Old Way.

A severe cold or attack of la grippe is like a fire, the sooner you combat it the better your chances are to overpower it. But few mothers in this age are willing to do the necessary work required to give a good old-fashioned reliable treatment such as would be administered by their grandmothers, backed by Boschee's German Syrup, which was always liberally used in connection with the home treatment of colds and is still in greater household favor than any known remedy. But even without the application of the old-fashioned aids German Syrup will cure a severe cold in quick time. It will cure colds in children or grown people. It relieves the congested organs, allays the irritation, and effectively stops the cough. Any child will take it. It is invaluable in a household of children. Cuban Diarrhea.
U. S. soldiers who served in Cuba during the Spanish war know what this disease is, and that ordinary remedies have little more effect than so much water. Cuban diarrhea is almost as severe and dangerous as a mild attack of cholera. There is one remedy, however, that can always be depended upon as will be seen by the following certificate from Mrs. Jennie Jacobs of Houston, Texas:

"I hereby certify that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy cured my husband of a severe attack of Cuban diarrhea, which he brought home from Cuba. We had several doctors but they did him no good. One bottle of this remedy cured him, as our neighbors will testify. I thank God for so valuable a medicine."
